

ELA 7 • 4th period

Tuesday, September 8, 2026 · 11:54 AM · 7th · 12:02 recorded

LESSON AT A GLANCE

The class focused on analyzing how the main character in a story changes over time, connecting this to earlier work on identifying the protagonist and understanding theme. Students discussed character traits, cited quotes from the text to support ideas about the character's growth, and considered how the story's theme and setting relate to that change.

YOU SPOKE

42.6 %

STUDENTS SPOKE

15.9 %

QUESTIONS

15

AVG. WAIT

3.07 s

Coverage: 12:02 recorded of 12:02. A dash means Wivoza could not measure that reliably — never that the answer was zero.

1

Talk & Participation

Who was heard, and for how long.

● You 43% ● Students 16% ● Silence 42%

2

Questions & Thinking

What you asked, and how long you left for an answer.

QUESTIONS ASKED

15

HIGHER-ORDER

47%

AVG. WAIT TIME

3.07 s

FOLLOW-UPS

10

WHY WAIT TIME MATTERS

Three to five seconds of silence after a question is the single cheapest change most teachers can make. It feels much longer than it is.

3

Checks & Feedback

How you checked they were with you, and how specific your feedback was.

CHECKS FOR UNDERSTANDING

2

FEEDBACK THAT WAS SPECIFIC

4 of 6

FEEDBACK MOMENTS

6

4

Clarity & Content

What the lesson said it was about, in its own words.

STATED OBJECTIVE

"Today we are going to analyze how the main character changes across the story."

KEY VOCABULARY MOMENTS

"The word protagonist means the main character the story follows."

1:05

"Theme is defined as the underlying message the author wants us to understand."

1:16

CONNECTIONS TO THE WIDER WORLD

"Remember when we talked about the protagonist last week, this connects directly to that."

0:36

"Tomorrow we will look at how the setting connects to the theme, so keep your worksheet handy."

11:48

5

Climate & Routines

Counts, not scores. There is no such thing as a correct number here.

TRANSITIONS

2

CLEAR DIRECTIONS

2

STUDENT NAMES USED

18

REDIRECTIONS

2

TONE BALANCE

6 positive · 1 corrective

6

Moments Worth Revisiting

Specific points in the recording, with timestamps.

1:42

Follow-up / probing question

"What are the two traits Marcus shows at the beginning of the story?"

4:43

Longest wait time

"Maybe to show that failing is part of getting better?"

0:00

Longest uninterrupted teacher monologue

"Remember when we talked about the protagonist last week, this connects directly to that."

7

My Reflection

Your own words — the part that turns a report into a change.

STRENGTHS

You opened class with a callback to last week's lesson on the protagonist, tying new material to prior learning, and followed up with a probing comprehension question ("What are the two traits Marcus shows at the beginning of the story?").

GROWTH AREAS

You're weighing the tension between giving longer wait time after a tentative answer (to draw out more student voices) versus keeping the class's momentum going. At 4:43 you gave a 5-second pause after a student's answer, hoping more hands would go up, but the moment moved on with just that one response.

MY NEXT STEP

Try a quick low-stakes strategy before opening the floor after a tough question — either a brief "jot a word down" pause or a "turn and tell your neighbor" moment — to see if it loosens up more hands without losing class momentum.